Excellence Award for Health Services During Crisis

The Sultanate of Oman Excellence Award for Health Services During Crisis is open to all government, public and private hospitals and health service delivery organizations who operate in a low-income country (as defined by the World Bank criteria) and/or operate in a region, territory, or country during times of significant crisis (war or natural disaster). The award recognizes excellence or outstanding achievements in delivering health services despite the challenging environment.

To qualify for the award:

- the hospital or health service delivery organization must be based in a low-income country as defined by the World Bank and/or in a region, territory or country facing a major crisis (war or natural disaster);
- the hospital or health service delivery organization has experienced or is currently experiencing a crisis that places a significant strain on its operations;
- the hospital or health service delivery organization has developed and implemented a project, programme, or service which demonstrated excellence or outstanding achievements despite the harsh conditions;
- a significant part of the project, programme, or service should be attributed to the organization's workforce and their efforts and initiatives to deliver health care under challenging circumstances.
